

Physicians: Learn About EHRs and obtain CME's

The American Academy of Family Physicians has launched the first of a series of online tutorials to help physicians better understand information technology issues.

The first tutorial covering hardware and network basics now is available at www.centerforhit.org/x1920.xml. The tutorial outlines how to evaluate hardware to best meet a practice's needs and preparations for installing an electronic medical records system in the office.

We can expect three more tutorials coming in the next few months. These will tackle office redesign and workflow issues, selecting an EMR and implementing an EMR.

Physicians can earn one continuing medical education credit for each completed tutorial. The service is free for members of Leawood, Kan. – based AAFP. The cost for non-members is $25 per tutorial.